DCCC SUMMER CREATIVE WRITING WORKSHOP

DCCC CREATIVE WRITING WORKSHOP

Bring pencils and notebooks and prepare to develop your senses! A good writer uses eyes, ears, nose, mouth, and hands to capture moments and create images for readers.

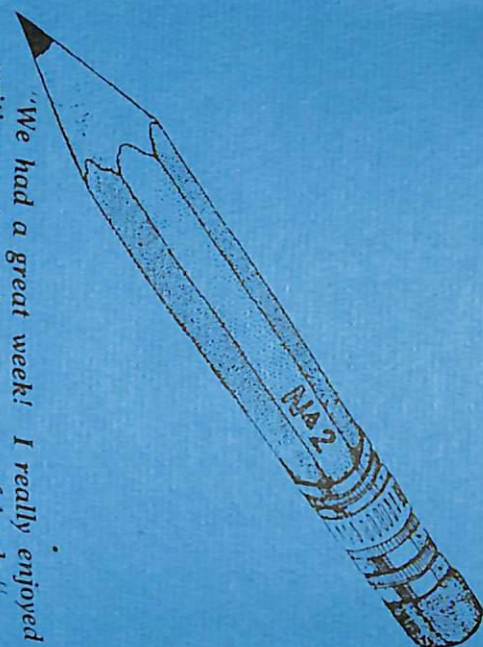

Instructor Steve Koski will help you learn to develop your own natural ability to create with words.

Koski, who received his MFA in Fiction Writing from Wichita State Univ., has a background of newspaper and magazine writing, as well as fiction and science fiction writing. Koski has studied under Russell Banks, author of THE BOOK OF JAMAICA, and Robert Day, author of THE LAST CATTLE DRIVE.

Whether you choose to focus on poetry or prose, Koski will help you develop a wealth of ideas and learn to enrich your writing with descriptive images. Focus will be on some group activities as well as individual projects and special problems in writing.

DCCC's Creative Writing Workshop promises a week of fun and discovery while you develop your hidden writing talents.

Fill out and return the attached enrollment form today!

"We had a great week! I really enjoyed writing stories and meeting new friends."

"I really liked the course and the teacher. I hope I can take this class again next summer!"

"It was neat to get to write about any subject we wanted. I only wish the class had lasted longer."

"It didn't feel like summer school because it was really fun. I enjoyed the opportunity to develop my ideas creatively!"

....Last year's Creative Writing students evaluate the summer camp.
